

Expansion of the Department

Since Year Zero and the establishment of the Ministry, this Department has solely been referred to as the Department of Development; sharing this singular topic attribute with only the Department of Justice.

However, on reflection – and in consultation with The Director – a decision has been made to widen the scope of this Department.

Henceforth, it shall be known as the Department of Development and Education.

This change came from a realisation that – whilst we stress that the Ministry is purely for the benefit of and implementation by The Director, and The Director alone – there are elements of what this ongoing journey are revealing to ourselves, that may benefit being shared with the wider backdrop to the Ministry.

We therefore intend to reflect on what we are learning through the process of developing the Ministry, and to share these learnings in documented form, in order to educate those who may wish to understand further.

One of these documents will be produced in the next few weeks; in alignment with The Director's entropy milestone.

The Department's webpage will also be updated during the current series, to reflect the name change; and as part of a wider update to the Ministry's website.